Bishop Galloway to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock will preach the sermon at the reopening and rededication of the First M. E. Church, South, Glasgow avenue and

The congregation of this church was the first of the denomination to be formed in St. Louis, and the church building at different times has been in several places. The present structure was greatly in need of repair at the beginning of the present Conference year, when the Reverend L. E. Todd & Came pastor.
Through the efforts of the Presiding

Elder, the paster and the Church Exten-sion Society, $5,000, the funds necessary to make all repairs, was mised, and the congregation, always a strong one, it is expected, will be much augmented by the

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC. What Are Some Tests of Repent ance?" (Luke III, 8-14; Panlm

11, 1-17.) BY AMOS R. WELLS. Repentence is not mere regret. A thousand reasons may make us sorry for our sin—the weakened body, the ruined reputation, the loss of friends, of mouey, of position—a thousand reasons but the right one, the sorrow of our Father in heaven.

Pasters and officers of local M. E. | And we may be sorry, and keep right on sinning.

Repentance is not a change of outward life. A drunkard, frightened by the consciousness of the chains tightening around him, may abandon his cups, while in his heart he is a drunkard still.

Repentance is not even a hatred of the sin, and a desire, however strong to get rid of it. Many a sinner despises himself, loathes his sin, and struggles flercely to escape from the pit into which he has fallen.

What is repen'ance, then, if it is none What is repentance, then, if it is none

What is repentance, then, if it is none of these things so often mistaken for it? You cannot leave Christ out of repentance. In attempting to do this, myriads confirm the failure of their lives.

Repentance is turning from sin toward Christ. Repentance is putting off the "old man" like an old coat, and putting on the "new man," Christ Jesus. It is not regeneration, but it is the beginning of that blessed process.

What are some of the tests of repentance? One blessed evidence is forgetfulness of the old life. We cease to be worried by it, to tremble over it. As Louise Chandler Moulton writes:

Let the old life be covered by the new. The old, old past, so full of sad mistakes; Let it be wholly hidden from our view By deeds as white and silent as snowflakes, Ere the earth life melt in the eternal Spring. Let the white mantle of repentence fling Soft drapery about it, fold on fold, Even as the new snow covers up the old.

Another est of repentance is a new confidence. Before, we were quite sure we should fail; now, we are certain that Christ will not fail us.

A third test of repentance is in our surroundings. A man cannot turn about and walk in the other direction without coming into different scenery. Repentance brings new associates, new work, new interests.

brings new associates, new work, new interests.

A fourth test of repentance is our thoughts. Before, when left to themselves, they sprang greedily upon images of sin and gloated over them. Now, when they are set free by leisure or by sleep, they turn instinctively to what is pure,
and to Christ, the fountain of purity.

Another test is the result of our life.
Do eyes brighten when you approach? Do you know of hearts the happier for your living? Are your tasks getting done better? These are good evidences of repentance.

ter? These are good evidences of repentance.

There is nothing in all the range of the spiritual life about which men so easily cheat themselves as this matter of repentance. So few repent, of those that think they do! Doubly necessary is it, therefore, that we apply these test to our repentance with stern honesty, and do not become that most pittable of fools, the man who blinds himself.

Y. M. C. A. Elects Officers. The following officers of the Central Y. M. C. A. were elected Thursday evening: A. G. Souther, chairman; W. O. Andrews, vice president; Frederick Vierling, secretary. The members of the Board of Prectors are Charles P. O'Fallon, J. W. Lewis, T. G. Rutledge, C. D. Gregg, W. H. Danforth, J. W. Estes, J. A. Gardner, D. R. Williams and W. W. Birge.

been an obstacle to his mission among the Jews.

TESTIMONY—(Verses 16 and 17.) The great purpose of the baptism was attained. The nature and character of Jesus were attested by striking phenomena as he came up from the water. The Holy Spirit in the form of a dove, the emblem of purity and gentleness, descended and lighted upon him, visible to both Jesus and John. At the same time a voice from heaven declared. "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," the form of the sentence indicating its source. The descending Spirit was seen but once in the lifetime of Jesus, because it remained with him, But the voice uttering the same thing, was heard several times afterwards. (Luke ix, 55.) Here were two Messianic predictions fulfilled the gift of the Spirit as an abiding presence (Isa. xl. 2) and the acknowledged sonship, the deepest mystery of the Oid Testament (Psalms ii, 7) and the sublimest truth of the New Testament. (I Tim. iii. 16.) After such heavenly testimony John was able to stand as a heraid to his generation and fulfill his mission in declaring that the Christ had actually come.

HUNGER—(Verses 1, 2, 3 and 4.) Immediately after his baptism Jesus went forth to meet Satan. It had been proved at the outset of the race that a mere man might fall. Can the God-man resist temptation? The test was to be made in three ways. (Heb. iv, 16.) The first was on the piane of the body where Eve broke down. (Gen. fii. 2.) After a Vorty days' fast Jesus was urged to supply his hunger by a miracle, a cunning suggestion to use divine power. Why not follow this hint? If for no other reason because Satan offered it. Every life must be conformed to the will of God, and any departure from that will brings disaster. Besides, the physical life of Christ was appointed to be distinctly human, the same as that of other men. (Phil. if, 7.) Had his body been supernaturally supported he would not have known infirmities. (I John i. 1.) Moreover, the interests of the soul are paramount, and the mortification of the body is sometime of the soul are paramount, and the mortification of the body is sometimes necessary. With one verse of Scripture quoted from Moses (Deut. viii, 5) the ehemy was silenced.

POPULARITY—(Verses 5. 6 and 7.) The next attack was on a more elevated plane. Understanding the mission of Christ. Satan proposed a short way to popular favor. By one leap from the tower of the temple, borne unhurt by angels. a marvelous result would follow. Descending to the earth the populace would hasten to do him homage as a divine being. But this was rejected. A definite plan had been laid down for the life of Jesus from which he must not depart. There were to be years of teaching and service, sometimes with opposition. (Luke xiii, 31), sometimes with popularity. That earthly career must end in tragedy, for so the prophets foretold, (Isa. liii. 5), and so was atonement to be made. The Son of God must not yield this foreordained ministry and sacrifice, whose far-reaching results were to be seen in all after centuries, even though some other method might quickly convince the world of his divinity. Jesus told Satan this, quoting another Scripture, and administering a severe rebuke for having taken one text alone to support his specious proposition.

POWER—(Verses 8 and 9.) Satan accomplished nothing in the last encounter, although he came with Scripture on his lips. One more, a final attempt, he determines to make. By some subtle influence he causes our Lord's mind to behold as from some lofty mountain all the kingdoms of the earth. What comprehensive and inspiring view, sweeping in all points of the compass, over the rightful possessions of the Lord Jesus (Psalm I, 10), now allenated from him through sin. To recover what was lost was the real purpose of his advent. (Matt. zviii, Ii). Standing by his side. Satan proposes to deliver the kingdoms of the world to Jesus. Then and there he will settle forever the aupremacy over the inhabitants of earth, ending the struggle and giving title to the property. One condition was imposed. There was to

He exercised authority over one who proposed to clothe him with authority. Jesus will some day possess all power, and he will rule the world as its rightful king, but this result will not be attained by compromise or subordination. Before the flend departed another Scripture text was hurled at him (Deut. vl. 13), declaring that all worship should be pald to God. This struck the vital spot, for Satan was, a traitor, seeking for himself honor and dominion. No wonder on hearing that he departed. There was nothing to be hoped from one who denied his right to be served. (James iv, 7.)

MINISTRY—(Verse II.) As Satan retired heavenly visitors appeared on the scene. Previously they had been present on important occasions (Luke II. 9) and subsequently they came when his interests were involved. (Ch. xxvii), 2.) But now they came to minister unto him, a service which they offered to righteus men (Heb. I. 14) under all dispensations. (Gen. xiz. I.) We are not told precisely what assistance lhey rendered to Jesus in the wilderness. It may be that they supplied him with food. It may as that they gave that they brought messages from the heaveanly world, glad tidings, the rejoicing of a ire spirits over the signal victory achieve. The plain Scripture reference is beautiful in, its brevity and announces the fact of supreme concern. Despite every effort to read out of the passage cartain world and change the meaning, a practice indulged by some, it must stand as proof of infinite relation between Jesus and the beings of light.

REFILECTIONS—Every man must be measured by his relation to Christ. See here what exalted place is allotted to John who made known the Messiah. In like manner but in less conspicuous way every man may introduce him to the world. All may do something that the ministry of Jesus may be successful in the earth, and Jesus accepts the service of all. 2 We learn here how Satan attacked Jesus, in those vulnerable places of which every man is conscious. Hunger, power, oppularity, touch the three weak than may be o
